Write a job description for a superhero needed to solve a problem in your community.

We need a superhero that can help us forget sad or unhappy things.

This hero needs to always be happy and not sad so that he or she can make people happy and forget about terrible happenings in their lives. These days, it's tough out there for a hero, and there's so much competition for the title of "saviour of the world" that our favorite champions have decided to take out one another instead of their enemies.

In this society, many people commit suicide due to extreme sadness or bullies. This kind of behaviour will not solve the problem but make those who like them, care about them, or admire them sad. So, this hero must have positive and not negative emotions to help these people bounce back on their feet.

You will need to put yourself out there when others need help. People are asked to do more, faster and with less these days, so it is no surprise that people don't offer to help as often as possible. When you are willing to help others, you tap into the $1+1=3$ axiom with the superpower of cooperation.

Many of you, everyday heroes, are hiding in plain sight -- you could be almost anyone. So, why wait? Reveal yourselves as the world needs you!
